CHRONICLES

(From St. Charles Notes)

OR

"Thou Shalt Not Tie a Can to a Bull-Calf's Tail"

1. And it came to pass in the sixth month and the twenty second day thereof, and about the third hour of the night, that a Bovine of the male persuasion hied himself from the green pastures to the hazy marts of that city called St. Charles.

2. Moreover did he bellow, the sounds thereof which was great, even like unto great thunder and he pawed the earth with much force and the dirt therefrom was scattered to the fourwinds of the heavens.

3. And the dwellers in the houses were much alarmed because of these great thunderings yea, even did the windows rattle like beans in a bucket, and the doors of the houses trembled like a willow leaf in the wind.

4. And it came to pass about that hour which is called nine o'clock that one Robert the Davis secreted himself in that part of his garden where he was wont to feed his Swine both morning and night.

5. And it came to pass that Robert the Davis spake unto himself after this manner: "Yea, verily inasmuch as that 'Dad Gnmmed' Bull hath disturbed the slumber of my household and the quietness of this community, I will do unto him even as the small boy doeth unto the yaller dog."

6. And while he was yet talking his foot stumbleth on a bucket which was made of tin and straightway did he pour some salt on the earth and the bull did lick the same and stood still.

7. Then did Robert the Davis with much dexterity and with some solicitude make fast unto the Caudal Appendage of the Bovine the empty tin bucket, while he was yet licking the salt.

8. And moreover after this thing was done, the Davis let the can fall against the leg of the Bovine at which he retallated and the rebound of the bucket was worse than the first, which angered the Bull even unto a fury.

9. And it came to pass that the Bull became much alarmed because of the great weight attached to his "fly switcher" and ran with great swiftness and his tail searched the atmosphere even as an astronomer would search the heavens, and no man dareth to approach him.

10. Moreover did he show contempt for the officers which govern the city, for Taylor and Crancer (the who maketh the law) and Eddie and Phelps, (he that sayeth unto the people, Peace be still; and they quit their rellings).

11. And lo even these men who are above the law and commandeth great respect, yet had it not been for their fleetness of foot: would have been sideswipped by the can as it meandered through space, he even passed them at train number 103 passes St. Charles.

12. And it came to pass while the Bull was yet running that one Jefferson the Blak who is the owner of a Chariot known as a Buzz Wagon was speeding along the highway, when he heard a great sound as of an approaching storm.

13. Moreover did the Jefferson put on much speed as did also the Bull, and he slackened not his pace, and the Blak spake unto himself saying: "Is it not so that this Chariot in which I ride is feared by both man and beast, and yet this animal doth not slacken his pace neither doth he side-track."

14. And it came to pass that the Bull gaveth none of the road, but taketh it all, and the Chariot was pushed aside even as you would blow a bubble from a pipe, and the Bull still runneth, where? no man knoweth. But the Davis sayeth he runneth from Haydes even unto the initial meal.

15. And this act of Robert the Davis provoketh those that sit in the council for have they not created a new law which reads, "Thou shalt not tie a can to a Bull calf's tail."

Neither can you make a Typewriter do good work with a poor Ribbon. The efficiency of a Typewriter depends as much upon the quality of the ribbon you use, as upon the machine itself.
